

UTT Chapter 15 Assignment

Hello there!

Sorry I haven't written in a while. I thought classes would slow down after midterms. Boy, was I wrong! Student Government elections are coming up in a few weeks, so the gang and I have been making flyers and planning speeches for the debates between the candidates. I can't believe I am actually running for a senate position! I have already been passing out flyers in my classes, and I even gave a speech in front of my Political Theory class about my platform: campus-wide free speech zone, increasing dining hall hours, and a library that is open 24/7. So far, other students have seemed really interested in these policy changes, and others people have actually suggested more of them! I am excited and all, but it is a bit weird seeing my face on flyers around campus. I'll let you know more about what happens in the next few weeks!

Other than campaigning, I haven't been doing too much outside of school. Mark and I have been running in the morning consistently. I don't want to put on the freshman forty! It has been a good experience getting to know Mark better. We have been talking a lot about the elections on campus and all the changes students have been promoting. Through our talks, I began to think seriously about what I was running for and what effects my changes would have at the university. To be honest, I never really paid too much attention during elections at home. It seemed like whoever spent the most money on their campaign won, regardless of their platform. Now, I have an appreciation for politics that I didn't have before. One person can make a difference, and it is important to stand for the right things in life.

Anyway, Mark brought up some interesting ideas about politics. As a Marxist, he spoke rather harshly about the "democracy" of capitalists. He said communism is "true" democracy. Since Sarah and Mark tend to agree, I wonder what she would say in comparison with Mark. What is the Secularist view of politics? Also how does Marxism view politics? I am meeting with Paige later on this week to talk about campaign strategies, so I will probably learn more about her views on politics as well. Of course, I would like to be prepared to ask questions. What role does politics play in Postmodernism? I know from your last letter that Islam adheres to shariah law. I bet this has implications on their political views, but I am not sure how exactly. What is the Islamic view of politics?

During my conversations, I began wondering what Christianity thinks about politics. Growing up, I heard people say Christians shouldn't be involved in politics because the world is a lost cause. Mark seems to agree. He said Christians should to stick to the immaterial world and keep religion out of politics. What do you think? Should Christians be involved in politics and, if so, how?

Thanks for all your help! Your worldview class has helped me out a lot. Hopefully we can talk more soon.

See you later!
