Fill-in-the-blank [Each answer is worth 2 points; each exercise requires two answers and is therefore worth 4 points.]

Fill in the missing word(s) to complete each statement.

25. Someone who intervenes on behalf of another, especially in prayer, is called a(n) intercessor.
26. Winsomeness is the quality of being pleasing or engaging.
27. Character is the personality traits or qualities that distinguish an individual.
28. Perseverance is the continued effort to do something in the face of difficulty, failure, or opposition.
29. Three important prayers for apologists to remember are the prayers of openness, intercession, and recollection.

Short Answer [Each question is worth 3 points.]

Answer the following questions using complete sentences.

30. Describe the prayer of recollection.
The prayer of recollection has two parts. The first part consists of detachment—letting go of anything outside Christ that we use to ground our identity. The second part is attachment, where we recollect who we are in Christ and evaluate our experiences in light of the truths in God's Word.

31. Describe qualities to consider in finding a mentor.

Answers should include at least four of the following: knowledge of the subject, practical experience, being quick to listen and slow to speak, honesty about limitations, the ability to encourage you, and the interest in doing so and helping you be more like Christ.

32. What is a “wounded healer”?

A wounded healer is someone who has experienced pain, received comfort from God, and can then offer comfort to others who are experiencing similar pain.

Essay [Each question is worth 5 points.]

Answer the following questions with at least one paragraph.

33. Discuss why it is important to have a game plan for sharing your faith, and why it matters what your audience’s beliefs, experiences, and concerns are.

Possible answer: It is important to have a strategy for sharing your faith because this helps you communicate with your audience. Knowing what your audience believes and cares about can help you address the relevant topics. For example, if a person you are speaking with already believes that the Bible is trustworthy, you do not need to spend time showing him or her why that is so. Knowing the experiences that have shaped your audience can help you decide how to talk to them. For example, if a group has experienced religious discussions as boring and interminable, you will want to share your faith in ways that are interesting and brief.

34. How do you develop a Christlike character?

Possible answer: You develop a Christlike character by being faithful to follow Christ each day, choosing to say yes to the Holy Spirit and no to sin. When we do this consistently, our choices become our habits and, eventually, our automatic responses. To be Christlike, we need to be ready to serve others, like Christ was. It means having a positive attitude and remembering that our actions have a greater impact than our words.

35. Why do apologists need perseverance in their work?

Apologists need perseverance because being an apologist is hard work that requires prayer, study, love, and guidance from the Holy Spirit. Apologists often face opposition, such as false teaching, slander, or criticism. They are in a spiritual battle. Not everyone is ready to believe, even when they hear the best arguments. Apologists need perseverance in order to continue doing their work despite difficulties, failure, and opposition. They need patience and perseverance to handle conflicts well. They also need perseverance to learn how to effectively share the good news and discuss difficult topics with others.
